BULOVA

YESTERDAY. TODAY. TOMORROW.

In 1875, Joseph Bulova, a 23-year-old immigrant from what is now Czechoslovakia, opened a little jewelry store on Maiden Lane in New York City.

In 1886, a beautiful lady arrived from France to find a home in New York Harbor. She was America's new heroine, the Statue of Liberty.

Both the Lady and the Immigrant shared the same faith in the future and the same belief that America, land of the free, offered opportunity for all.

And while Miss Liberty held high her torch to welcome newcomers to these shores, Joseph Bulova's little enterprise grew to become the nation's leading American watch company.

Now, in 1986, we celebrate a rejuvenated Miss Liberty's centennial birthday. And in commemoration, Bulova pledges a bright new era in watchmaking...advanced technology, superior craftsmanship, vibrant styling...timekeeping that suits today's young and vital Americans and the generations to come.

Happy birthday, Miss Liberty. Happy birthday to you.
